

Post-doctoral Training Opportunity: Latino Research Team, Oregon Social Learning Center

The Oregon Social Learning Center's Latino Research Team (OSLC LRT) is seeking an early career scientist interested in pursuing postdoctoral research training focused on Latino behavioral health disparities, acculturation processes, and culturally specific preventive interventions for Latino youngsters and families in emerging immigrant communities.

Interested individuals are encouraged to contact Dr. Charles Martinez, LRT Founder and Principal Investigator, at charlesm@oslc.org to discuss their background and training interests. Funding is not guaranteed, but will be sought by the OSLC LRT through a National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) research supplement to promote diversity in health-related research (PA-08-190). This mechanism promotes diversity through providing training support to individuals who are from underrepresented ethnic and racial groups, have disabilities, and/or are from socioeconomically disadvantaged backgrounds. Postdoctoral training experiences will be individualized based on the needs of the candidate. For further information, please contact Dr. Charles Martinez or Betsy Ruth, LRT Coordinator, at betsyr@oslc.org; tel: (541) 485-2711.
