

University of California, Los Angeles. The UCLA Department of Psychology invites applications for an open-rank position in Clinical Psychology. We seek to recruit a faculty member whose research and teaching provides a foundation for a program in Latino mental health. Our goal is to recruit a strong candidate who can launch an extramurally funded research program on the role of cultural and other factors in psychopathology, with preference given to applicants working on such factors in Latino populations—the fastest growing populations in Southern California. We are open to candidates with a wide range of clinical-science research specializations, including, but not limited to, culture and psychopathology, mental health disparities, evidence-based interventions, mental health services research, prevention research, biobehavioral health interventions, or substance abuse. Teaching duties include undergraduate and graduate courses, as well as clinical supervision. Review of applications will begin on November 1st 2008 and will continue until the position is filled. Inquiries should be addressed to Hector F. Myers chair of the search committee (e-mail: clinicalsearch@psych.ucla.edu). For consideration, please send curriculum vitae, statements of research and teaching interests, relevant publications, and arrange for three letters of recommendation to be sent to: Clinical Psychology Search Committee, Department of Psychology, Box 951563, UCLA, Los Angeles, CA 90095-1563. UCLA is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer; women and minorities are encouraged to apply.
