The College of Public Health at Kent State University is seeking to fill a tenure track faculty line in the Social and Behavioral Sciences (www.kent.edu/publichealth). We are looking for dynamic and productive researchers who can contribute to advancing public health research in the social and behavioral sciences and support the continued growth of our newly formed College. Offering degrees at the bachelor's (BSPH), master's (MPH – five concentrations including Social and Behavioral Sciences, Epidemiology, Health Policy and Management, Biostatistics and Environmental Health Sciences) and PhD (Prevention Science, Health Policy and Management, and Epidemiology), we offer an exciting environment for those looking to be part of growing our emerging College.

Candidates should hold a PhD in the social and behavioral sciences including psychology, sociology, health promotion/education or related fields. A MPH is desirable. A focused line of research and existing extramural funding is required. Desirable candidates should be interested in collaborative and community-based research projects. Current faculty are conducting research in substance abuse, obesity and violence prevention.

Kent State University (40,000 students across our main and regional campuses) is located in Kent, Ohio, which is 12 miles east of Akron and 35 miles southeast of Cleveland. We are an affiliate of the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges and the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. The Carnegie Foundation ranks the University among the nation's top 77 research universities. This places Kent State among an elite group of the nation's nearly 3,900 colleges and universities.
