JOB DESCRIPTION

The Counseling Psychology program at the University of Oregon (UO) is seeking to hire a 9-month open rank faculty member, with preference for a faculty member at the advanced assistant or early associate rank, to begin fall, 2011. Candidates should have a program of research focusing on prevention science related to Spanish-speaking and/or Latino/a families. The new faculty member will collaborate with current faculty members across the College of Education (COE) and university to engage in work aimed at improving health and educational outcomes for Latino/a individuals and families.

Required Qualifications:

- *Ph.D. from an APA accredited program in Counseling Psychology (including combined programs in Counseling Psychology with School and/or Clinical Psychology), Oregon psychology license eligible, able to supervise clinical work with individuals, couples, and families;
- *Established record of scholarly productivity;
- *Track record or potential for external funding, particularly through federal agencies;
- *Expertise in prevention science related to the well-being of Latino/a or Spanish-speaking individuals and families;
- *Experience or potential to work in or coordinate school- or community-based intervention programs;
- *Ability to advise and supervise doctoral student research;
- *Ability to supervise graduate students providing clinical services with Spanish-speaking or Latino clients;
- *Demonstrated commitment to enhancing multicultural competencies and promoting social justice in training activities;
- *Ability to work collaboratively and collegially with colleagues in the department and across the University.

Responsibilities: Teach graduate courses; contribute to a potential new master's program in prevention science; advise and supervise doctoral students; contribute to the implementation of the COE-wide diversity strategic plan; conduct an active, externally funded research program; contribute to department, college, and university governance in a manner consistent with the needs of a major research university; and contribute to emerging departmental continuing education and distributed learning activities. Preferred candidates will be fluent in Spanish.

The Counseling Psychology program is the 8th longest continuously APA accredited program in the U.S. and its highly productive faculty are dedicated to enhancing multicultural competencies, promoting social justice, and using an ecological model as a conceptual framework for all training and research activity. The program is housed in the Department of Counseling Psychology and Human Services, along with the Couples & Family Therapy masters and the Family and Human Services undergraduate programs.
